Names Index -- Maryland

Names index includes all names listed in the inventories. Maryland inventories generally include the names of two next of kin, the two greatest creditors, two appraisers. The name of the executor or administrator is usually included. Not included in these transcriptions, in most cases, are the names of the Register of Wills or other court official who recorded the inventory in the court record. Many of the names are very similar, the use of senior, junior, military rank, etc. are somewhat fluid; consequently there may be a repetition of the same name in the index.

At the end of an inventory entry,  signifies that this individual is mentioned in another inventory, either as an appraiser, next of kin, executor, or administrator. That inventory's FILENAME is entered after the deceased's inventory information.

Names Index -- Virginia

Virginia inventories list far fewer names than Maryland inventories. Generally four men are appointed by court to act as appraisers and of those four, three usually serve. Many times, the court officer or justice of the peace is listed as administering the oath to the appraisers. In many cases the clerk of the court signs his name to the record when it is entered into the will books.

In the index of Virginia names, the same keys apply as with Maryland. Seldom are the next of kin or creditors named. In cases where a decedent has served the court by appraising an inventory, administering the oath, or has been named as the executor or administrator of another inventory, the FILENAME of the additional inventory is added at the end of his entry, following two asterisk (). County court clerks have been listed separately.
